U. S. REJECTS SEAWAY PACT

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

THE intense spirit of nationalism which pervades the world, stopping the free exchange of goods and wealth at the imaginary lines we call political boundaries, is illustrated by the United States senate which today rejected the St. Lawrence Seaway Treaty with Canada so earnestly advocated by President Roosevelt.

New Fleet of Air Giants to Aid U.S. in South America

Pan-American Airways Launches 19-Ton Sikorsky Clipper Ship

THE FIRST OF SIX Germans and French Bidding for Trade With Fast Planes

NEW YORK. (AP)—America's entry in the race for international air transport supremacy, a giant "clipper ship" with an expected non-stop flying range of 2,500 miles, is ready for its first trial run through the clouds.

Biggest air liner ever built in this country, Pan-American Airways' new four-engine flying boat has been trundled out of the factory at Bridgeport, Ct., and will take the air as soon as the Housatonic river is free of ice. It is the first of six similar ships being built for Pan-American, which entered the South American field in 1928 and which is being confronted with competition by the government-subsidized air liners of France and Germany.

Germany is now flying the Bathurst-Natal route by Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh on their recent flight from Africa to South America, and France has developed three new "super planes" at a reported cost of 50,000,000 francs for the South American service.

Designed by Igor Sikorsky, the new 19-ton clipper ship will be equipped for passenger traffic out of the South American run. It will carry 32 passengers, 1,000 pounds of mail and express and a five-man crew 1,200 miles without stopping. At present the longest single hop is 600 miles.

Without passengers, but with a full mail load, specifications call for a flying range of from 2,500 to 3,000 miles which would enable it to be used in transatlantic service.

Built with the greatest secrecy, the plane was found to be a departure from previous ships of its kind. The hull is 80 feet long, with cabins 10 inches wider than pullman cars, and with sleeping space for 24. The four motors, mounted on the forward edge of the wing, are expected to develop 3,000 horsepower and to give the ship a cruising speed of 150 miles an hour.

Costing approximately $1,340,000 in the aggregate, the six planes were described as part of a $5,000,000 expansion program.

U.S. Plans Local Economic Surveys

S. E. Freeman Will Direct Workers in Hempstead County

One of the latest developments in the President's recent recovery program reached out into Hempstead county this week when, on orders from Washington, D. C., relayed through the Little Rock relief offices, several economic surveys will be made to determine true conditions in local employment.

S. E. Freeman, local statistician clerk, who returned from Little Rock after a hurried call there, brought back forms and all preliminary instructions to guide the conduct of this fact-finding investigation. A group of qualified workers in this county who are registered at the reemployment office will be selected for employment on this survey. Mr. Freeman of the local county staff will supervise all operations.

The aim of the federal government is to obtain all facts that can assist in the relief of state and local unemployment conditions. The interviewers to be sent out into the county for this purpose will be strongly instructed to get the facts. The urgency of this study clearly indicates that Washington will not be satisfied without basic facts and is in a hurry for them.

Commenting upon the results of the same surveys that are being completed in the northwest part of the state, Col. Frank R. Allen, director of research and statistics for the FEPA at Little Rock, said that the success met there had been due to the splendid cooperation received from the business men. The same cooperation in this county, allowing the interviewers to get the facts, will mean speed relief activities in this section.

American Gunboat Burns; Crew Safe

187 Blue Jackets Saved by British in Orient Waters

English and Chinese Vessels Come to Rescue After Fire

JAPANESE HORROR Rescue 13 Alive From Tomozuru, and Recover 66 Bodies

HONG KONG, China. (AP)—Two rescue vessels, one British and the other Chinese, reported early Thursday morning (Wednesday afternoon in America) that they had saved 187 men from the United States gunboat Fulton which burned in Bias Bay, 50 miles northeast of here.

It is believed the 187 composed the complete personnel of the ship.

13 Japs Rescued
SASEBO, Japan. (AP)—Thirteen sailors snatched from slow death described Wednesday the hours of ghastly suffering they withstood after the Japanese torpedo boat Tomozuru capsized with 113 men aboard.

The Tomozuru, found floating on her side with the crew trapped in the hull after she turned over in a storm, was towed into port and her steel walls cut open to rescue members of the crew who had not yet suffocated. Sixty-six bodies were removed from the hull Wednesday.

Must Hike Wages to Avert Relapse

Senator Wagner Declares Labor Is Lagging Behind Profits

WASHINGTON. (AP)—A new economic collapse unless labor is given a further participation in the recovery program was predicted Wednesday by Senator Wagner, New York Democrat, chairman of the Labor Board.

Opening hearings before the senate labor committee on his bill to strengthen this board and guarantee the right of collective bargaining without company interference, Wagner warned:

"Wages are again lagging behind production and profits. We may expect another collapse if this disparity continues."

3 County Schools to Get U. S. Help

37 Teachers in Hempstead Recommended by FERA

Due to a misunderstanding over rules and regulations regarding aid to be given schools in Arkansas under the emergency relief program, state officials of the FEPA at Little Rock have issued the following statement:

Schools to be eligible for this relief must have made the maximum effort to keep operating. One of the provisions is that the district must have voted the 18 mill tax.

"The state education department certifies the list of schools and a list of the teachers assigned to state offices of the FEPA. Schools may be reopened pending formal approval by the state office but in the event the school is found later to be ineligible, teachers will receive no compensation for their work. Also any teacher who is found by later investigation to be ineligible, will not be paid. These are strict instructions from the National Relief Administrator at Washington and cannot be changed."

"A force of auditors from the office of Robert H. McNair, chief accountant, is now in the field checking the financial condition of the schools that have been submitted to the state relief offices. If the school is found to be eligible, formal approval will be forthcoming from Little Rock. We cannot make any commitments however, without definite instructions from Washington."

J. H. Andrews, educational advisor to the FEPA is busy now checking the eligibility of teachers that have been assigned in the schools and will report them to W. R. Dyess, state FEPA director, as rapidly as possible.

The number of districts approved in Hempstead county is three, with 37 teachers recommended for employment.

25% Tax Penalty After Thursday

Deadline for Filing of U. S. Income Tax Returns March 15

The Bureau of Internal Revenue Wednesday issued an appeal and a warning to all taxpayers who return their income on a calendar year basis to be sure to file their returns not later than Thursday March 15.

Special attention is called to Section 221 of the Revenue Act of 1932 which imposes a heavy penalty for late filing, namely, an addition of 25 per centum to the tax. For example, if one's tax would otherwise be $100, the penalty for failure to file the return on time (unless due to reasonable cause) is $25, making the total tax $125 instead of $100.

CWA Canning Units Given Warning on Need of Sanitation

County Health Officer and Supervisor Complete Survey Tour

SIX MORE TO OPEN Eight Sewing Units Will Be Reopened Until Material Is Gone

Some of the CWA canning units in Hempstead county will be closed immediately unless requirements of the government as to sanitation, ventilation and screening are met, Dr. G. H. Martindale, county health officer, and Mrs. J. L. Jamison, supervisor of women's service projects, said Wednesday after a survey of the county.

Canning units were inspected at Fulton, Columbus, Washington and Patmos, Mrs. Jamison said. She declined to comment on the condition of these units, but warned that some would be closed if government rules were violated.

Mrs. Jamison announced that six new canning units would open soon to take care of vegetable and other garden products. These units will be under government supervision.

Mrs. Jamison also announced that eight sewing units in the county which were shut down recently, would now be opened to use up all material now on hand before the termination of the CWA May 1.

As the result of the canning and sewing program under government supervision this spring, Mrs. Jamison reported that in several communities citizens are co-operating for the establishment of permanent canning kitchens to be operated as community enterprises.

At Blevins a new building is under construction which is to be used as a canning kitchen and community club house. Bingen and Patmos have already completed buildings to be used as canning kitchens. Mrs. Jamison reported that the units at Bingen and Patmos would pass a thorough inspection as to sanitation, if such an examination were to be made.

Plans for permanent canning kitchen at Fulton, Washington, and Spring Hill are being formulated, Mrs. Jamison said.

36-Hour Week for Auto Industry Near

Henry Ford Restores $5-Per Day Wage in His Plants

DETROIT, Mich. (AP)—Directors of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce announced Tuesday night they had recommended to members that the average weekly hours of productive workers be cut from 40 to 36, and that compensating wage increases over rates prevailing February, 1934, be made effective on or before March 31, 1934.

The announcement was made on the eve of the meeting in Washington of the National Labor Board with automobile manufacturers and employees to settle labor disputes in the Michigan automobile industry.

Directors of the NACC said that members of the industry, "intending to keep the law, do not intend to submit to being coerced extra-legally."

"Labor unrest in the automobile industry," said the statement, "has been brought about principally not by dissatisfaction with wages and working conditions, but rather by artificial issues that have arisen out of efforts to unionize the plants involved."

Forty-seven thousand of the 70,000 men employed by the Ford Motor Company throughout the United States benefited by the increase. They had been receiving $4 and $4.40 a day and it was estimated unofficially, that the raise would add approximately $5,000,000 to the Ford Company's annual pay roll.

It was the first blanket increase for Ford workers since the minimum wage rate of $6 a day prevailing in December, 1929, was increased to $7 in what the company described as its contribution to check the depression, then just beginning. That rate was maintained for 22 months, before wage cut-backs began.

NEW YORK. (AP)—One hundred men were reported killed Wednesday in a dynamic explosion at La Libertad, El Salvador, according to a message received at the New York office of the All-American Cable company.

WASHINGTON. (AP)—The senate Wednesday rejected the St. Lawrence seaway treaty with Canada 46 to 42. A two-thirds majority is required for ratification.

The vote administered the first major legislative setback for the Roosevelt administration. Only a short while before the treaty vote President Roosevelt told reporters he would send the treaty back for reconsideration when there is time.

Hempstead and Nevada alternate in nominating candidates for the senate, all candidates coming from Hempstead this year.

Another Convicted in Factor Snatch

Basil Banghart Sentenced 99 Years by Chicago Jury

CHICAGO. (AP)—Basil Hugh (The Gwl) Banghart was convicted Tuesday night of a part in the John Factor kidnaping and sentenced to 99 years in prison.

The quick verdict of the jury marked the speed attending the entire trial. The jury retired at 3:51 p. m., and gave its verdict at 5:07 p. m. The case itself, consumed only a week in the courtroom.

While the state had asked either for the death penalty or the 99-year sentence, prosecutors expressed themselves pleased at the sentence which makes Banghart the fourth member of the Touhy gang to be sentenced for kidnaping the market speculator.

Roger Touhy, leader of the Chicago gang, Albert (Polly Nosa) Kater, and Gustave Shafer are serving similar sentences for the abduction. They were convicted a few weeks ago in a trial that started two days after Banghart and Isaac Costner, another member of the mob, were captured with two women in Baltimore.

Costner confessed participation in the crime, turned states' evidence, and in the two trials pointed out members of the Touhy gang as plotters in the Factor case.

Canadian Treaty Loses on Senate Vote Despite F. D.

Administration Suffers Its First Major Legislative Defeat

PRESIDENT SPEAKS

Roosevelt Fears Canada Will Build It Anyway, U. S. Losing Out

WASHINGTON. (AP)—The senate Wednesday rejected the St. Lawrence seaway treaty with Canada 46 to 42. A two-thirds majority is required for ratification.

The vote administered the first major legislative setback for the Roosevelt administration. Only a short while before the treaty vote President Roosevelt told reporters he would send the treaty back for reconsideration when there is time.

Roosevelt's Statement
WASHINGTON. (AP)—President Roosevelt is shaping a national aviation policy which will include not only air activities of the army, navy and marine corps, but customs, internal revenue and commerce branches as well.

The president, it was learned Wednesday, is going to ask for an immediate study of the whole problem, but whether it will be done by a board or an individual has not been decided.

The board named Tuesday by Secretary Dorn of the Department of War, including Orville Wright, Charles A. Lindbergh and others, will inquire into the army air service alone.

The president, however, is mapping a more comprehensive investigation and study to include all phases of aviation.

Without mentioning directly the house action favoring cash payment of the bonus, the president said Wednesday there was danger in paying off government obligations in paper money in that it might lead to meeting the running expenses of government by such a method.

He also revealed at his press conference that he has determined upon a policy that in all federal income tax cases the decision as to whether criminal intent is involved shall be left to grand juries.

Touching upon another subject, he said the St. Lawrence seaway was going to be built regardless of the outcome of the senate vote late Wednesday on ratification of the treaty with Canada; but he feared defeat of the treaty may place the seaway entirely in the hands of Canada.

Democratic leaders hold little hope of winning ratification.

Seaway Faces Defeat
WASHINGTON. The senate will vote upon ratification of the St. Lawrence seaway treaty Wednesday night, rejection of the agreement with Canada conceded by both sides.

Senator Key Pittman, Democrat, Nevada, foreign relations committee chairman in charge of the treaty, admitted Tuesday night that only a miracle could save the treaty—and he did not look for a miracle.

Confident of their ability to defeat ratification, opponents of the treaty will make no attempt to adopt reservations but will work for a vote directly upon the main issue. Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, Democrat, Illinois, opposition leader, withdrew a reservation he had pending. Senators William H. Dieterich, Democrat, Illinois; Bennett C. Clark, Democrat, Missouri;

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Sorry Story Is That of National Labor Board... Chisler Gets the Last Word... CWA Dead in Name Only... Tugwell Still Is "In Good."

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—The New Deal's gummiest inside story is that of the National Labor Board.

But shenanigans involving NLRB have developed a knock-down capital-labor fight which labor is likely to win.

Part of industry, defying NIRA kept on intimidating and imposing company unions on employees. Ernest Weir of Weirton Steel conspicuously defied NLRB as it sought an employee election in his plants.

NLRB asked the Justice Department to prosecute. Boss Joe Guffey of Pennsylvania, Weir's friend, intervened for the steel man.

Roosevelt, fearing New Deal court tests, personally took over the case and vainly tried to persuade Weir. Then he officially empowered NLRB to hold elections, but put NLRB under NRA jurisdiction by ordering its complaints referred to General Johnson's committee.

NLRB floundered, with Chairman Wagner busy in the Senate, no vice chairman, and few members appearing for hearings. Two conservative labor members, Dr. Leo Wolman and George Berry, favored enforcement by persuasion, not action.

Wolman, accused of delaying further Weirton action, resigned. Wagner, demanding that he not quit at a critical time, got him to cancel that.

Secretary Perkins led a group demanding that Wagner be free from Johnson. Roosevelt consented and she drafted a modification order for him. It was lost from F. D.'s desk while both sides stood for days with bated breath.

Roosevelt signed a newly prepared order February 23, but not until March 3, after Johnson's field day for critics had produced hot fire at the Weirton and other cases of NIRA breakdown, did he issue it.

He simultaneously strengthened the board by giving it two vice chairmen and some new members. After discussion at the White House, NLRB, with Wolman absent and not voting, again referred the Weirton case to the Department of Justice for prosecution.

Wagner, disgusted with delays and NLRB's internal situation on top of industrial defiance, had decided to pin his faith on his bill to abolish company unions and give NLRB unquestioned legal power.

The great capital-labor fight impends in Congress, since Weir's lawyers easily can drag out his case in the courts until NIRA expires, summer after next.

That gives employees fired for union activity plenty of time to starve.

Chisler Gets Last Word
PWA met a new type of chiseling in a southern state where its advisory board chairman was holding daily meetings, with the seeming idea of collecting regularly the $10 a day salary provided for such officials—when they work. Other state boards meet every week or two.

Deputy Administrator Henry M. Waite, touring the country, fired this unusual official when he arrived on the spot. That night, as honor guest at a banquet, he found the man billed as a speaker. And he had to listen to a strong diatribe at PWA policies in Washington.

Dead in Name Only
Is civil works a dead duck, or the administration promised, or not? What's the difference between civil works and the work relief phase of the new relief program?

Harry Hopkins sidesteps the latter question, after answering the first affirmatively. Yet he promises that all needy, able-bodied persons will be employed and that he will "maintain the integrity of CWA projects" while eliminating "some types" of CWA work.

The answer is that Roosevelt wants to bury that name "civil works" deep under the sod—and get rid of CWA's various objectionable features.

Tugwell Still in Good
Some people who don't know any better are construing Assistant Secretary Rex Tugwell's trip to Puerto Rico as a sort of banishment, indicating his gradual disappearance as a chief Roosevelt adviser. The fact is, experimental Mr. Tugwell is intensely interested in economic rehabilitation of such places as Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

They're miniature laboratories for him as he envisions rehabilitation and land retirement on a huge scale in continental America.

It also can be revealed that, what with all the recent ice and snow here, Tugwell thought it would be a swell trip.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Pre-School Era Is Neglected Age in Child's Development

The importance of child training before the age of six is described by Olive Roberts Barton below. It is another article in her series on modern child training.

Probably the most formative period of a child's life are the years just preceding his entrance into school at six years of age.

How the age of six happened to be chosen as the standard age of entrance to school life must be attributed more or less to accident because little was known in the early days of educational history about the different cycles and stages of child development.

As it happens, however, a better age probably could not have been selected. "Kindergarten" play, now so perfected, is calculated to develop the child between four and six and is based upon his growing capabilities and enlarging character.

The Nursery School goes still further back into infancy and takes into consideration the physical influence so closely associated with habit at the time.

Early Training
Now two things are noticeable. One is that most children do not go to kindergarten and therefore, unless the parents realize the importance of the pre-school era and use judgment in their development, they are likely to be misunderstood. The other is that our public school systems have until quite recently literally ignored the fact that a child was anything but a machine, therefore after six he still had little opportunity for needed guidance.

The wonder is that the world has done so well. This is the argument of the conservatives and a good one. But it does not go far enough. If it is possible to stabilize mental content in the child and thereby avoid unnecessary unhappiness in later years, the theory leaves ground. To try to make adults less nervous, healthier, saner, it is necessary to look at the young child first.

This is a point of view the conservatives would do well to consider. Child training does not have "the child" exclusively as its object, but the man to be, or the woman. No country can successfully go on with many millions of neuroathenics, and prisons with millions more, not to mention the mental discomfort of the rest of us. Who indeed is quite normal?

It does not follow that a child has to go to kindergarten by any means to have a fair chance to become his own best, but it does follow that children must be recognized and are recognizing the fact that young children need more than facts and discipline, that their judgment is immature and their natures different. If this be true it is quite as necessary that the home too should take cognizance of the importance of the developing child.

Part Discipline Plays
Discipline must always play a part in life. We never escape it until we die. Therefore the child must have it, most likely, but we have over-emphasized it largely in the past and under-emphasized natural self-discipline. To shape a child's values so that he will come to know instinctively right from wrong, needs attention. He won't always, of course, and here we must come in and operate as the law he must meet later.

The little child is full of impulses. During his pre-school and early school years, we should know something about directing rather than frustrating them.

The natural place for training is the home. The teacher cannot be expected to take the place of the parent, and does not do so, but in this eulogy of the kindergarten I wish to show that it was the first to recognize the wisdom of guidance.

Parents are not only becoming interested but converted, as is demonstrated by the fact that mothers are so earnestly trying to learn. Certainly a better time is ahead for all.

The death of nine young men at Dartmouth from carbon monoxide, or coal gas, poisoning serves to focus attention again on the continuous hazard to health, particularly during the winter months, from this cause.

Cases occur also in other periods of the year, but because windows so frequently are closed and ventilation so difficult to control during the cold weather, the number of deaths invariably rises sharply with coming of winter.

The gas itself is colorless and odorless. It is produced when wood, coal, coke, illuminating gas or gasoline are burned. If the flame is hot, the gas is burned more completely than when the flame is slow and has insufficient air.

Small amounts of carbon monoxide cause headache and other symptoms; large amounts produce death.

It is well for most people to recognize the early symptoms of exposure to this gas. If you get a headache or feel faint, nervous, or irritable, when working where there is a possibility of this gas, go out into the fresh air at once and stay there until you feel better.

When you go out, walk slowly and when you get out, sit down quietly. Do not try to walk. There may not be enough oxygen in your blood to permit you to make any extra effort or to exert yourself in any way.

Any extra exertion at this time is dangerous, because it may bring on unconsciousness.

If a person who is working in an atmosphere where carbon monoxide may be present, suddenly faints, he should be taken into the fresh air at once.

Put blankets over and under him and surround him with hot water bottles. Keep him warm by some effort or he may develop pneumonia. Persons who have been asphyxiated with carbon monoxide gas especially are likely to get pneumonia.

If he has difficulty with breathing, the patient should be given artificial respiration by the manual method. A physician should be called at once, because the difference between life and death may depend on suitable treatment.

tention to the heart and respiration. The chief domestic appliances involved in the records of carbon monoxide poisoning are heaters, without flues, used in bedrooms and bathrooms, and occasionally a kitchen gas range or a hot plate. Deaths have been reported among persons in closed rooms who use charcoal in a bucket for heating purposes.

It is said that Benjamin Franklin developed the stove and the furnace and gave the patent rights to the world in 1750, because he realized the dangers to life from this gas.

The smoke from a coal fire contains various amounts of carbon monoxide, depending on how free the draft may be. The more the combustion of the gas is interfered with, the higher is the percentage of carbon monoxide.

The flue gas from an ordinary furnace will cause poisoning when this gas gets into the air. This, obviously, is what happened to the boys at Dartmouth.

How's The Weather?

The day is fair when hearts are light. When in the heart the light shines bright, When not a cloud obscures the mind, The day is dark when in the soul The storms of tumult surge and roll, And there is tempest in the heart And bitterness in every part. The day is one that we call bad When nothing shows to make us glad And, through distorted vision, we Can only evil know and see. The day is sunny when the sun Within us shines on every one. When "How's the Weather?" is asked of you, You then must answer to be true Just how within you view the day. If sunny, then "It's bright," you say. —Selected.

A match between Primo Carnera and Max Baer to decide the World Heavyweight championship title is more imminent now than ever before and may be arranged as early as next June.

This was the statement made by Bill Duffy, the champion's American manager, when he and Carnera left the M-G-M studios on completion of the new picture, "The Prizefighter and the Lady," in which the champion and contender fought a ten-round screen battle.

"Heretofore there has been a wide breach between Baer's managers and ourselves," said Duffy, "but during our long joint stay at the M-G-M studios we had an opportunity to talk things over and came to an agreement that will bring the match many months nearer."

The prizefighter picture, which opens with a Thursday matinee at the Saenger is said to be the most authentic and spectacular of all time. Myrna Loy has the feminine lead and the cast also features Jack Dempsey, Walter Huston and Otto Kruger.

CANADIAN TREATY

and Josiah W. Bailey, Democrat, North Carolina, will follow suit Wednesday.

Senators who have fought for the treaty—in some cases against their own private wishes—are disappointed that the president has not used his influence more strenuously.

Clark Scores Project Perhaps the largest opposition group of all comes from the Mississippi valley which sees the Lakes-to-Gulf waterway crippled by the treaty's limitation upon the Chicago diversion from Lake Michigan.

It was as spokesman for this group and their Midwestern constituents that Senator Clark of Missouri made the major speech against ratification.

He professed his loyalty to the policy of waterway development; but that, he explained, did not mean that he must approve the pending treaty. He said it was plain that the chief interest of President Roosevelt was to create cheap power for the benefit of his own state of New York and neighboring states. But power was not the primary consideration for the people of the Mississippi valley, the senator declared.

Senator Clark declared that the treaty would visit upon the Midwest another disastrous economic catastrophe like that brought about by the construction of the Panama canal. "The Panama canal has given so great a transportation advantage to the seaboard states as almost to place an absolute bar in the path of our industrial development," he said.

Robinson to Defense Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, majority leader, made the principal argument in favor of the treaty.

"The St. Lawrence waterway is a natural channel for commerce," he said. "It is therefore a sound economic proposal to construct this canal. It will serve a substantial part of the population of the United States and Canada. The cost of construction is fair in view of the benefits anticipated. "Ever since I have been in Congress I have heard opposition from railroads to the construction and improvement of waterways. I have never known an instance in which a great waterway was developed that it did not add to the commerce of that section and indirectly, if not directly, benefit the railroads."

The Democratic leader said representatives of the Mississippi valley had no cause to complain; he declared they had received generous treatment from other parts of the union in appropriations for constructing the Mississippi valley waterways system. He said they could not justify their opposition on sectional or local grounds.

He predicted that future requirements of the country in the way of transportation would make necessary such an outlet as the St. Lawrence seaway, and if completed it would be used to its greatest possible capacity. Throughout a long day of debate, Senator Lynn J. Frazier, radical Republican, North Dakota, was the only other beside Senator Robinson to speak at length in the treaty's behalf. He chided Republican colleagues who intended to vote in opposition. He held up to them the Republican pledge in the 1933 platform promising construction of the seaway.

Board in Washington had adopted a resolution requiring all members of the corporation staff who are members of state legislatures either to discontinue their services with the corporation or to resign from the legislature.

"In thus tendering my resignation I presume no statement is necessary further than to say that I am unwilling to accept the alternative offered in the resolution of resigning as state senator," his letter said. "To do so would be to abandon an office of trust to which the people of my senatorial district elected me, which I will not do."

"I accepted the office of state senator to which the people elected me, together with all the duties and responsibilities which go with such office. Scanning New Books

By BRUCE CATTON

The theme of the minister of the gospel who makes a sincere and determined effort to apply Christian teachings literally, in cases where most of us are content to pass by on the other side, has been a fascinating one to novelists for years.

The most recent book to tackle this theme is "Such Is My Beloved," by Morley Callaghan, and it is a very delicately written and discerning bit of work.

Mr. Callaghan takes as his central character a young priest, attached to the staff of a cathedral in a large American city. The priest, a devoted and prayerful young man, is thrown by chance into an encounter with two young women of the street.

He hastily draws away from them; then, suddenly, it occurs to him that it is precisely such people who are in need of the love, the compassion, and the help which the Christian religion offers, and he resolves to see that they get it.

Having adopted this program, he manfully tries to go through with it. He calls at the girls' room, prays with them, gives them more than he can afford of his little store of money, tries to show them that there is at least one person who likes them, sympathizes with them and does not condemn them.

Inevitably, he gets into a jam. His efforts to find work for the girls arouse the ire of a rich parishioner. His bishop finds out, fears a scandal, disciplines him. The girls run afoul of the law and are jailed; the priest winds up with a nervous breakdown, his program worse than a failure.

Mr. Callaghan has handled a difficult theme with restraint and intelligence. Publish by Scribners, and book sells for $2.

SPRING'S BRUIN!

This spring showing was a bear--and then some. When spring-like zephyrs first permeated Sultana's rocky lair in a Milwaukee zoo, she emitted for a public appearance, bringing with her--yes, you've guessed it--the very newest thing in polar bears. The woolly newcomer, Sultana's 11th offspring born in captivity, first saw the dim light of its cave three months ago, but not until the first mild day did Sultana give her cub this peep at the outside world.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Cleanliness Is Basis of Good Grooming

Good grooming, like intelligent child training, begins at home. You can't expect a bimonthly visit to the hair-dresser and manicurist to keep you perfectly groomed. No amount of beauty treatments in salons can give that cleanliness charm which comes only from the attention you give daily to your grooming.

For instance, nothing is more essential to beauty than the daily bath. And more and more women are getting into the two-a-day habit--a warm, soapy bath at night and then an invigorating cool shower in the morning. But, whatever your schedule, remember that cleanliness begets charm and therefore beauty.

Well kept finger nails are also necessary for perfect grooming. Nails need not only a complete manicure once a week, but daily attention. One or two whisks with the file will smooth rough edges and a dab of cuticle oil, every now and then, will keep cuticle smooth and soft. When part of the polish wears off one nail, remove what is left and put on a new coat. Bothersome? Yes, certainly. But in the long run you'll reap your reward.

Not like others..

Even so.. you can say Chesterfields are "not like others"

NO two people in the world look alike... just like folks. No two leaves are the same. And it's the same with cigarettes... no two brands are alike.

Furthermore, not only are the tobaccos different, but the way the tobaccos are handled is different. This, you can understand.

You know just as well as we do that no two manufacturers use the same kinds of tobaccos, or blend them or cross-blend them or weld them together in the same manner.

We do everything that science knows and that money can buy to make CHESTERFIELD as good a cigarette as can be made.

We hope you like them. They are "not like others."
